We define the electric potential as the potential energy of a positive test charge divided by the charge  $q_0$  of the test charge.  $U = \frac{W}{q}$  It is by definition a scalar quantity, not a vector like the electric field. The SI unit of electric potential is the Volt (V) which is 1 Joule/Coulomb. The units of

Page 3. The Action Potential: An Overview  $\hat{c}$  The action potential is a large change in membrane potential from a resting value of about -70 millivolts to a peak of about +30 millivolts, and back to -70 millivolts again.  $\hat{c}$  The action potential results from a rapid change in the permeability of the neuronal membrane to sodium and potassium.

forwards or backwards. Guess what the reverse of an oxidation reaction is a reduction, and vice versa. ... the lowest reduction potential goes on the left, where it gets reversed and becomes an oxidation. For our example  $2H^+ + 2e^- \rightleftharpoons H_2$  has a reduction potential of 0.00 V, Redox Potential  $\hat{c}$  If an electrical current (a flow of electrons) is applied in the opposite direction, the strength of the electron activity or flow of electrons in the reduction reaction can be measured.  $\hat{c}$  The potential is measured at the point that there is no net flow of electrons.

second type of potential estimate is called sales potential, which captures the same basic idea as market potential but as it applies to a single brand. Sales potential is defined as the total amount of a single brand that could possibly be sold to the market.

potential and will depolarize the cell at electrode #2. No change will be observed in the membrane potential at electrode #3 unless electrode #3 is within a few mm of electrode #2. A pulse of current that hyperpolarizes the membrane will transiently increase the magnitude of  $E_m$  at electrode #2.

It is defined as the potential energy of pure water, with no external forces acting on it, at a reference pressure (atmospheric), reference temperature, and reference elevation. Soil-water potential is then determined as potential energy per unit quantity of water, relative to the reference potential of zero.
